WILL HAYR A HEARING.

These gentlemen had an informal conference with the city's Executive, told him of their objections to the placing of the crematory where it is proposed to put it, informed him that hundreds had already signed petitions which would be presented to him later on, and to which there would be many more signers, and asked him to delay action in the matter until they could be heard. His Honor gave them the assurance that he would not act for several days and that they would be given a full hearing. With this they retired.

The news of the sad event spread rapidly through business circles and created a profound impression, as up to the moment of the fatal stroke Colonel Crenshaw had shown no sign that he was not in his usual health.

About the hour first named Colonel Crenshaw started to go up the steps in the enshaw started to go up the steps in the rehouse building leading from the street or to the office of his nephew. Mr Daby Crenshaw, and just as he reached the of the flight was seized with dizziness i fell unconscious.

He was taken to his nephew's office and placed upon a lounge, where he revived sufficiently to ask his nephew to telephone to Colonel W. W. Gordon. with whom he had a business appointment at 11 o'clock, that he could not keep the engagement. A little later he remarked that a man sixty years of age could not be counted upon to keep engagements, and then, as if realizing his condition, continued: "Perhaps I will never keep this one."

In the mean time physicians had been sent for. Dr. Lewis Wheat was the first to reach the sufferer, and soon being joined by Drs. George Ross and W. W. Parker, Colonel Crenshaw was placed in a hack and taken to his home. He became unconscious on the way, and died within two minutes after entering the house. While he was being borne to the hack he again gave evidence that he was aware of his condition by telling those about him "Good by." During the meeting it was stated that Mr. R. B. Chaffin had made a proposition which might lead to a solution of the problem. His offer is to give and deed to the city one or two acres of land of his Chatsworth farm, on which all of the city garbage may be deposited. The idea is to have the matter carried down the river on barges and put on the city lot, whence it will be removed for use on the farm for fertilizing purposes. This, it was thought by many present, would work satisfactorily and relieve the city of the necessity of erecting a crematory.

Colonel Crenshaw was born in Richmond sixty-one years ago and belonged to a family which for half a century has been identified with the history of the miling and the shipping and forwarding business of the city. He was brought up to mercantile pursuits by his cleer brothers, Lewis D. Joseph, and William G. Crenshaw, only one of whom—the last named—survives him, but when quite young went to sea, where he served two years before the mast. On his return to Richmond he studied law under the late Arthur Morson and entered upon the practice of his profession here. In a short time he formed a partnership with Judge Beverley R. Wellford, and was succeeding admirably at the bar when the war broke out.

ATRACTED THE GOVERNOR'S ATTENTION.

Colonel Crenshaw was an enthusiastic member of old Company F, and on an excursion of that organization to the springs he acted as quartermaster, in which capacity he attracted the attention of Governor Lether, who was a guest of the company on the occasion. On the Monday after "Pawnee Sunday," ever memorable in the history of Richmond, the Governor appointed Colonel Crenshaw to the joint position of quartermaster and commissary. In that capacity he worked day and night receiving and quartering incoming troops until relieved of the quartermastership and double duty by the appointment of another to the post of quartermasters. He continued to fill the position of commissary-general of Virginia until General Lee was assigned to the command of the Virginia forces, when he was relieved by the appointment of the late William B, Blair, formerly of the old army, and made lieutenant-colonel of infantry. His regiment joined Garnett in West Virginia.

IN THE COMMISSAEY AGAIN,

served. Despite the fact that at least 250 men were present the dinner was perfect in every detail and each one was watted upon with the utmost celerity. The repast was served in courses and wound up with dessert and cigars. When all had caten their fill—and it took as great deal to fill them—Colonel H. C. Jones in graceful language thanked the nosts for their hospitality. Colonel Jones, to the "Second" then arose and assured the Virginians with the utmost cordiality that they were more than welcome guests. After the Peninsula campaign Colonel Frank 6. Ruffin, who was by actual duty (though not by assignment of rank assistant commissary-general, induced Colonel Crenshaw to enter the commissary department again. Here his advice and assistance proved so valuable that he was sent by the Confederate Government to Nassau, then a depot for blockade-runners, to receive and forward supplies. At Nassau he co-operated with his brother Captain William G. Crenshaw, who had been sent to Liverpool under a contract with the Confederate authorities with the result that notwithstanding the Government never assisted the enterprise with a ment never assisted to the property of the single advance, they ran into Wilmington as much subsistence as was brought there by all the vessels sailing under the regulations established by the War Department and as much meat as was run in by all the other vessels put together.

AFFER THE WAR.

Immediately after the close of the war Colonel Crenshaw went to Brazil, where he spent about six months. He then returned to Richmond and engaged in farming near the city for a short while, but in 1868 entered the cotton commission business in New York city, in which he remained until 1873. Later he was president of the Southern Telegraph Company.

During recent years Colonel Crenshaw had devoted himself principally to winding up estates in which he and his family were interested, and here his legal education served him good stead. With two others he was appointed a commissioner to sell certain large tracts of coal lands in West Virginia, conveyed by the late Robert H. Maury to trustees to secure creditors. Colonel Crenshaw was the active commissioner, and addressed himself to the work before him with a degree of intelligence, patience, zeal, and foresight which not only enabled him to bring order out of confusion, but secure most substantial results for the creditors. flow of eloquence.

Captain George Wayne Anderson in response to repeated demands arose and yied with Lassiter in his beautiful flow of Increase.

Then the crowd wanted "Cunningham" and Captain Frank, as he is variously called, and though he "laid low" he had to give them a talk. This he did in his usual good style.

Of course Licutenant Hine, who during the week has won almost more friends than any man in the "First," had to say something, and though very timid naturally he met the emergency in a graceful manner.

THE WILMINGTON BOYS TO VISIT THE "FIRST."

The Wilmington soldiers—than whom a better set of fellows never lived—were invited to come to Ricchmond, and Captain Renan, their commander, said they were going to accept the invitation at their carliest opportunity.

After the dinner the "regiment" was marched to their train, escorted by the Wilmington Light Infantry, and as the train steamed out a scene of the wildest enthusiasm ensued. The band struck up "Bixie," and scores of hands were extended through the car windows and shaken with the utmost warmth. And then away the Old Dominion boys steamed in a driving rain.

It was amusing to note the relieved expression upon the faces of Captain Cyrus Bossieux and Sergeant Henry Moore when their duties as commissary officers expired. No two men among the Virginians have worked as hard, and both looked worn out. For weeks to come Sergeant Moore will dream of barrels of bread, buckets of pickle, and dishes of Brunswick stew, which latter concection he compounded with divine skill. Colonel Crenshaw was regarded as one of the best business advisers in the city. His mind was not only naturally of a superior order but was splendidly cultivated. He had travelled extensively both in this country and abroad and had been a constant and most discriminating reader. As a student of Shakspeare and contemporaneous literature he was especially well-versed. In addition to being able to repeat page after page of the text—to repeat indeed, whole plays—he was thoroughly fauntiar with the arra as embraced in treatise criticism discussion of mooted readings, and the philosophy of characters, &c. Nothing was more delightful than to hear him discuss any new dissection of Shakspeare that might come out. One of his prominent characteristics was his intense admiration of Stonewall Jackson.

Genial and generous.

HOME AGAIN FROM GAMP.

Colonel Cresshaw was one of the most genial of companions. He was generous, warm-hearted, and loyal to the core to those he loved and no man had truer or more steadfast friends. He was twice married, both of his wives having been daughters of the late Loftin N. Ellett, the accomplished clerk of Henrico County Court. His only surviving child is a daughter by the second marriage, who resides in New York, but was in the city on a visit to him at the time of his death. His only surviving sister is Mrs. Ann Grant. The First Virginia Regiment Reach Here at 1:20 o'Clock This Morning.

After a week's camp upon one of the most beautiful beaches of the southern Atlantae coast, the First Virginia regiment returned home at 1:20 o'clock this morning. A lovely and weird scene did the streets present on this hallowed Sabbath morn as the troops, at 1:30 o'clock, paraded to the inspiration of soul-animating music through the crimson maze of pretty colored lights.

At the depot were hundreds, including the militia, who tendered the boys from Wrightsville a rousing reception. Eager hands clasped one another and greetings of gladness were interchanged in a general

A DISAPPOINTED CROWD.

Three thousand people were in the vicinity of the Bryd-Street station at 8:30 o'clock last might eagerly awaiting the arrival of the train from Wilmington which bore the soldiers on their homeward flight. Doomed were they to be disappointed for it was not yet 9 when a telegram announced that the regiment did not leave Wilmington until 5 o'clock in the afternoon and would not reach here until 12:36 Å. M.

The immense gathering began slowly to disperse, and the general enthusiastic greeting that the boys would have received had they arrived sooner was not given them.

ESCORTED FROM THE TRAIN.

The regiment was met at the depot by those members who did not go, the Howitzers and the "Blues" band. These constituted the escort, who with the "soldiers from the beach" paraded the streets to thrilling strains of music and inspiring tap of drum.

The troops marched to the Armory, at the corner of Seventh and Marshall streets, where the command "break ranks" was executed and a brief recount of incidents of the trip given over the beaming punch-bowl.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., July 25 .- While the schedule now in use on the Chesa-peake and Ohio railway is of great convenience to passengers to and from this point, Charlottesville has one serious and just cause of complaint in regard to it, in which your city is also directly interested— that is, that the earliest day mail from Richmond arrives here at 2:40 P. M., and the consequence is the morning dailies of our State capital reach us nearly two hours later than those of Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and elsewhere, each city being a greater distance than Richmond.

Can the matter be remedied? It does seem that something is wrong when the Disparch reaches here nearly twelve hours after its publication.

A telegram was received here this morning announcing the death in Rolla, Mo., of little Wille, child of Mr. W. H. and Mrs. Mary B. Echols. Mrs. Echols is the daughter of A. R. Blakey, Esq., of this place. SOMETHING BADICALLY WRONG,

MEETING AT BARTON HEIGHTS.

The citizens of Barton Heights held a mass-meeting last night in the Wigwam to prevare for action in the matter. There was a large attendance. Mr Fourqurean presided. A committee was selected for that purpose, and soon reported a set of very strong resolutions, which will be presented to the Mayor by a committee consisting of Messrs. T. A. Lamb, W. K. Bache, and George A. Minor.

Several speeches were made and numeriously, signed petitions of protest exhibited, including those gotten up by people living on First, Second, Third, and Fourth streets. (Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.)

WILLIAMSEURG, VA., July 25.—Captain
W. J. Stores, a leading citizen of York, and a gentleman who stands high in the councils of the Democratic party of that section, was here to-day and was questioned as to what part the Alliance men of his county would take in the coming legislative campaign in his district. The Captain replied that he has talked with a good many prominent members of the order down his way and that they were opposed to any Alliance candidate and did not think there would be any candidate for the House of Delegates put up by the Allisnee men. Captain Stores is the Superintendent of Public Schools for the county and a prominent Alliance man, being a member of a Grafton lodge.

PERSONAL NOTES. [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] Camp Fowle and Wrightsville are now memories of a never-to-be-forgotten past in the minds of the sun-tapned soldiery of the First Virginia regiment.

Ere the morning star was well up in the skies yesterday receive sounded, and a few minutes after 4 o'clock the work of pulling down the tents was commenced. Two hours later breakfast was served, and a little after 9 o'clock the jolly Virginians, after casting one last, fond look at the deserted camp-ground, marched to the station.

THE REGIMENT IN WILMINGTON.

Wilmington was reached a little after 10, and here the "First" was met by their old friends, the boys of Company C, Second North Carolina State Guard, and headed by the magnificent band of this organization escoried to the Cape-Fear Club House.

Here liquid refreshments of peculiar strength and remarkable "insiduousness" were served, but every one kept straight, for it was positively known that a deligntful aftermath would follow. While at the club Frank Cunningham was completely lionized and had to sing until his very langs aimost gave out.

A MAGNIFICENT DINNER.

After spending several hours in this manner and being the recipients of unbounded hospitality the citizer soldiers were drawn up in line and marched to the Orton House, where one of the most magnificent meals ever partaken of was served. Excitement in Bristo!.

[Special telegram to the Dispatch.]

Beistol, Tenn., July 25.—Two important dispatches have been received here to-day. One was that Bailey's lawyers had instructed the clerk of Washington County Court not to issue the writ ordering the sheriff to put Bailey in possession of the road till further instructions from them. Another was from Mariou, which said substantially as follows: "The case of Bailey vs. the South Atlantic and Ohio road came up in Judge Kelley's court to-day at Mariou. He refused to dissolve the injunction asking for Bailey as receiver and ordered that he be put in immediate possession of the road and all other properties involved in the suit."

When this news came to Bristol it created a big excitement, for every one has been in suspense for many months. Most people here thought Kelley would dissolve the injunction and the news came like a thunder-clap. Your correspondent is informed to-day that some of Bailey's friends are going to boycott the Daily News, of this city, for the position it has occupied for two weeks past. A petition is in circulation, they say, to night and a handful will probably sign it. Smith, the editor, is laughing and says he may lose twenty-five subscribers, but will gain five times as many. Bailey will be here in company with the sheriff to-morrow or Monday.
